In the third quarter of 2020, the financing of non-financial corporations (NFCs) returns to more normal levels compared with those of the previous quarter as the end of lockdown in May allowed economic activity to pick up, resulting in a lower financing need for NFCs. The flows of MFI loans and debt securities are thus lower than in Q2, and flows of shares and net equities are down. At the same time, financial investment is positive but to a much lesser extent than in Q2, due to a lower amount of deposits and a reduction in flows of money market funds. Flows of debt securities, however, become positive.

In the third quarter of 2020, general government financing is significantly lower than in the previous quarter, due to a sharp reduction in debt securities issuance, as well as a lower flow of deposits. The end of lockdown has made it possible to reduce the growth in public debt, in particular by reducing the use of short-time work schemes. At the same time, financial investment eases, the flow of deposits being back to the amount observed in Q1.

Household's financial investment in the third quarter of 2020 returns to a level close to that of the first quarter. The removal of lockdown has effectively enabled households to consume more, in contrast to the forced savings behaviors of the previous quarter. Transferable and passbook savings accounts deposits are thus lower than in the second quarter. However, these investments in currency and deposits are still twice as high as in Q4 2019. Flows of securities remain positive but are declining, mainly due to a decrease in flows of non-MMF investment funds. Life insurance and pension plans flows increase slightly, particularly for non-unit linked contracts, but remain low compared to previous years. Finally, the flows of MFI loans are higher than in the previous quarter.
